

SECOND SUICIDE DUE TO WOMAN'S DEATH ON B. R. T.

Niece of Mrs. Alice Bliss Hangs
Herself in Cellar of Her
Trenton Home.

The second suicide growing out of the tragic death of Mrs. Alice Bliss, under the wheels of an "L" train at Coney Island on September 15, is that of Miss M. Mooney, of Trenton, N. J., a niece of Mrs. Bliss.

Miss Mooney hanged herself with a door chain in the cellar of her home yesterday while her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mooney, were in Brooklyn attending the funeral of Mrs. Mooney's brother, William J. Bliss, who committed suicide Monday evening.

Mr. Bliss hanged himself in the cellar of a house he owned in Brooklyn avenue because he could not live without his wife and blamed himself for her death. Miss Mooney, who was only nineteen years old, had lived with her aunt and uncle at frequent intervals from babyhood and killed herself in a fit of extravagant grief over their sad end.

A Trio of Tragedies.

The Coney Island Mardi Gras is apparently responsible for this trio of tragedies. Mrs. Bliss, who was childless and of middle age, was very anxious to see one of the night parades. Her husband, being a very heavy man, disliked crowds, and was averse to visiting the island during the crush. It was arranged between them that Mrs. Bliss should go to Coney Island on the evening of Sept. 17, in company of Miss Julia Walling, a friend.

They left a train at the Culver line depot. The platform was crowded. A train started to pull out. Mrs. Bliss's dress was caught in a gate, and she was dragged under the wheels.

The news of the shocking death of his wife utterly unnerved Mr. Bliss. He told his friends that he held himself responsible for her death because it he had gone to Coney Island with her the accident could not have happened.

Following the funeral he lived alone in the house at No. 24 Herkimer street, which he and his wife had occupied for twenty-five years.

On Monday afternoon he went into the cellar of a flat house in Brooklyn avenue, and hanged himself to a beam. He had no relatives in Brooklyn, and the funeral arrangements were made by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mooney, of Trenton. Mrs. Mooney is Mr. Bliss's sister.

While Mr. and Mrs. Mooney were here attending the funeral they left their business in Trenton in charge of their daughter Myra. It was thought best not to bring her to New York because the terrible death of her aunt had been a profound shock, and her uncle's suicide, following so soon after, and depressed her to an alarming degree.

Mr. Mooney, immediately after the funeral of Mr. Bliss yesterday, went to Trenton. He visited his store and not finding his daughter there hurried to his home. He was met by a young daughter, who hysterically broke to him the news of the third tragedy.
